

THE NEW YORK HERALD.

WHOLE NO. 10,789.

NEW YORK, THURSDAY, MARCH 15, 1866.—WITH SUPPLEMENT.

PRICE FOUR CENTS.

THE FENIANS.

Both Wings Progressing in Donations of Money and Arms.

Affairs Steadily Going Ahead at Union Square.

The Country Contributing Its Enthusiasm and Its Greenbacks.

MEETINGS OF THE VARIOUS CIRCLES.

&c. &c. &c.

THE O'MAHONY MOVEMENT.

At the Fenian headquarters on Union square matters are still progressing in the same steady manner. The business of each department goes on with the utmost regularity, and by far the heaviest portion consists in the filling up of receipts. The circles in the West are now pouring in their money with a will. Several communications were received from these circles yesterday, enclosing large sums of money, and all expressive of their devotion to Stephens and O'Mahony. Among these communications was one from a circle in Mound City, Illinois, which had withheld the usual remittance during the late troubles. The members of this circle sent in five hundred dollars and also a large case of magazine rifles. The Hibernian Benevolent Society of Washington, D. C., have forwarded a large sum of money. Colonel O'Mahony has just returned from Boston, where he was agitating the question of Irish invasion.

On Tuesday morning a committee from the employees of the Fifth Avenue Hotel called at headquarters and presented to the Fenian Brotherhood a purse of $400. The committee consisted of Messrs. Perry, Canavan and McNaughton. Mr. O'Mahony being absent they were introduced to Mr. Kilian. Mr. Canavan presented the purse, saying—"Allow me, sir, on behalf of the employees of the Fifth Avenue Hotel, to present through you to the Fenian Brotherhood their tribute to the cause of Ireland's nationality. We see with heartfelt grief our country bleeding and bitterly oppressed, and we look to you and your associates, who are the leaders in this cause, and the chiefs of a mighty organization, to see to it that the chains which are now galling our mother land be not allowed to bind her down much longer. Hasten to her aid, do your duty like men, and every true heart which calls old Ireland 'mother' will bless you and be with you in your undertaking."

Mr. Kilian, in the absence of the Fenian Brotherhood, thanked the committee for the generous donation in a frank and very appropriate address, assuring them by referring to the work done and being done that their confidence was not misplaced, and that soon they and all who love the day to come would see the flag of liberty flying to the world that Ireland was "in action again."

The committee stated that this donation was from the employees exclusively, and that it could not be regarded as a full exponent of the will of the organization.

A committee of the New York Association of the Fenian Brothers were also received by Mr. Kilian, in the absence of Colonel O'Mahony. The chairman accompanied a very able and sensible address with a donation of three hundred dollars, which he presented to Mr. Kilian. The committee, after expressing their hearty endorsement of the principles of the Fenians, adjourned.

An hour or two afterwards another committee from the St. Nicholas Hotel, headed by Mr. Kilian, came to the Head Centre, and sending the following letter to the Head Centre:

Mr. RICHARD KELLY, March 14, 1866.

Dear Sirs—We, the employees of the St. Nicholas Hotel, love our dear country, and desire to render the services of your and your associates, James Stephens and John Mitchel, too highly to be belied in our donation at this hour of our country's distress. We shall be glad to contribute even four hundred and forty dollars for the glorious cause. We trust to God we had four hundred thousand times as much to give.

The committee stated that there should be no sentimentalists in your ranks, and we mean that you shall receive no more than the sum of $400.

Colonel JOHN O'MAHONY, C. F. E. B., March 14, 1866.

Dear Sirs—The Fenian movement has been received with great interest by the people of Ireland. Many of us have been moved to action by the efforts of your and your associates, James Stephens and John Mitchel, too highly to be belied in our donation at this hour of our country's distress. We shall be glad to contribute even four hundred and forty dollars for the glorious cause. We trust to God we had four hundred thousand times as much to give.

The committee stated that this donation was from the employees exclusively, and that it could not be regarded as a full exponent of the will of the organization.

A committee of the New York Association of the Fenian Brothers were also received by Mr. Kilian, in the absence of Colonel O'Mahony. The chairman accompanied a very able and sensible address with a donation of three hundred dollars, which he presented to Mr. Kilian. The committee, after expressing their hearty endorsement of the principles of the Fenians, adjourned.

An hour or two afterwards another committee from the St. Nicholas Hotel, headed by Mr. Kilian, came to the Head Centre, and sending the following letter to the Head Centre:

Mrs. JEFF DAVIS EN ROUTE TO CANADA—
SEIZURE OF REBEL COTTON IN TEXAS—
MEASURES FOR PREVENTION OF THE CHOLERA, &c.

Montreal, March 13, 1866.

Mr. Jefferson Davis is here, en route to Canada. In the Berwick parish, Louisiana, sixty-five plantations sold for what the elaborate machinery upon them originally cost.

Hon. J. T. Trotter, one of the leading judges of Mississippi, died at Holly Springs last week.

Daily passenger trains are now running on the Jackson Railroad, between New Orleans and Canton.

The old Ponchartrain Railroad Company have declared a dividend of ten per cent.

The Clarksville correspondent of the Houston Telegraph charges that the Treasury agents there have seized seven hundred bales of cotton, which it was well and generally known did not belong to the late confederacy.

Through a third party the Treasury agents offered the owners of the cotton to release it for a consideration of three hundred bales. The owners refused this offer, and the cotton was removed at once, at much greater expense than it would have cost the owners. Every effort was made at Clarksville and at New Orleans to secure the release of the cotton; but it failed.

Major Kennedy has issued a proclamation directing the strictest measures to be taken to clean everybody's premises in preparation for the advent of the cholera. Severe penalties are to be imposed upon all persons found to be delinquent after the 25th inst. in keeping their premises scrupulously clean.

Great indifference was shown here yesterday as to the result of the municipal election. A large number of voters did not go to the polls, and especially was this the case with business men.

The steamer Evening Star, from New York via Havana, is detained at Quarantine.

MEETING IN AVENUE.

The large hall on Avenue C, near Twelfth street, was densely packed on Tuesday evening with enthusiastic friends of Ireland. Stirring addresses were delivered by Mr. Kilian, General Kelly, Captain Murphy, Captains Conolly and others. All the bands were heard and donations of arms received. We give an extract from General Muller's speech:

"THE GENERAL COMPLIMENTS OF THE HERALD."

Mr. KILIAN, March 14, 1866.

An enthusiastic gathering assembled at Orange, N. J., on Tuesday last. The meeting immediately followed one on Monday, and the same patriotic ardor was manifested as on the previous day. Captain Murphy, Captains Conolly and others, addressed the meeting. The address of the speeches a resolution was unanimously adopted endorsing Stephens and O'Mahony. Two hundred and fifty dollars was subscribed for bonds, and deep regret was expressed that they should have given anything to the Roberts party.

THE SWEENEY MOVEMENT.

Warlike Pronouncements—The Plans, Arms and Resources of the Military Wing, &c.

All eyes are now turned upon the Fenian department, which is causing so much terror to the Kanawha, the promulgation of the address issued by the General Sweeny branch naturally excited general comment. It was written on Washington's birthday, and privately sent to the circles. Our reporter was permitted to glance at a few of the vital points:

THE "CANADIAN POLICY."

There are no details of the Canadian policy, but the fact of the absence of the Canadian troops from the field of battle, and the want of a leader to command them, is a serious omission. There are no details of the Canadian policy, but the fact of the absence of the Canadian troops from the field of battle, and the want of a leader to command them, is a serious omission.

The address is contained in the following extract:

"These, then, brothers, come to the war once again, but not of your own accord, others have sent you, and you have no palatial halls to decorate and embellish. You have no large crowd of officers to lead, and no great mass of men to follow. Your banners are not above all respects have an bearing in a cause like ours, a man who is not ready to bear and suffer calamity and death, and who is not willing to sacrifice his life for freedom, is unfit to be a soldier of freedom."

This address is contained in the following extract:

"These, then, brothers, come to the war once again, but not of your own accord, others have sent you, and you have no palatial halls to decorate and embellish. You have no large crowd of officers to lead, and no great mass of men to follow. Your banners are not above all respects have an bearing in a cause like ours, a man who is not ready to bear and suffer calamity and death, and who is not willing to sacrifice his life for freedom, is unfit to be a soldier of freedom."

This address is contained in the following extract:

"These, then, brothers, come to the war once again, but not of your own accord, others have sent you, and you have no palatial halls to decorate and embellish. You have no large crowd of officers to lead, and no great mass of men to follow. Your banners are not above all respects have an bearing in a cause like ours, a man who is not ready to bear and suffer calamity and death, and who is not willing to sacrifice his life for freedom, is unfit to be a soldier of freedom."

This address is contained in the following extract:

"These, then, brothers, come to the war once again, but not of your own accord, others have sent you, and you have no palatial halls to decorate and embellish. You have no large crowd of officers to lead, and no great mass of men to follow. Your banners are not above all respects have an bearing in a cause like ours, a man who is not ready to bear and suffer calamity and death, and who is not willing to sacrifice his life for freedom, is unfit to be a soldier of freedom."

This address is contained in the following extract:

"These, then, brothers, come to the war once again, but not of your own accord, others have sent you, and you have no palatial halls to decorate and embellish. You have no large crowd of officers to lead, and no great mass of men to follow. Your banners are not above all respects have an bearing in a cause like ours, a man who is not ready to bear and suffer calamity and death, and who is not willing to sacrifice his life for freedom, is unfit to be a soldier of freedom."

This address is contained in the following extract:

"These, then, brothers, come to the war once again, but not of your own accord, others have sent you, and you have no palatial halls to decorate and embellish. You have no large crowd of officers to lead, and no great mass of men to follow. Your banners are not above all respects have an bearing in a cause like ours, a man who is not ready to bear and suffer calamity and death, and who is not willing to sacrifice his life for freedom, is unfit to be a soldier of freedom."

This address is contained in the following extract:

"These, then, brothers, come to the war once again, but not of your own accord, others have sent you, and you have no palatial halls to decorate and embellish. You have no large crowd of officers to lead, and no great mass of men to follow. Your banners are not above all respects have an bearing in a cause like ours, a man who is not ready to bear and suffer calamity and death, and who is not willing to sacrifice his life for freedom, is unfit to be a soldier of freedom."

This address is contained in the following extract:

"These, then, brothers, come to the war once again, but not of your own accord, others have sent you, and you have no palatial halls to decorate and embellish. You have no large crowd of officers to lead, and no great mass of men to follow. Your banners are not above all respects have an bearing in a cause like ours, a man who is not ready to bear and suffer calamity and death, and who is not willing to sacrifice his life for freedom, is unfit to be a soldier of freedom."

This address is contained in the following extract:

"These, then, brothers, come to the war once again, but not of your own accord, others have sent you, and you have no palatial halls to decorate and embellish. You have no large crowd of officers to lead, and no great mass of men to follow. Your banners are not above all respects have an bearing in a cause like ours, a man who is not ready to bear and suffer calamity and death, and who is not willing to sacrifice his life for freedom, is unfit to be a soldier of freedom."

This address is contained in the following extract:

"These, then, brothers, come to the war once again, but not of your own accord, others have sent you, and you have no palatial halls to decorate and embellish. You have no large crowd of officers to lead, and no great mass of men to follow. Your banners are not above all respects have an bearing in a cause like ours, a man who is not ready to bear and suffer calamity and death, and who is not willing to sacrifice his life for freedom, is unfit to be a soldier of freedom."

This address is contained in the following extract:

"These, then, brothers, come to the war once again, but not of your own accord, others have sent you, and you have no palatial halls to decorate and embellish. You have no large crowd of officers to lead, and no great mass of men to follow. Your banners are not above all respects have an bearing in a cause like ours, a man who is not ready to bear and suffer calamity and death, and who is not willing to sacrifice his life for freedom, is unfit to be a soldier of freedom."

This address is contained in the following extract:

"These, then, brothers, come to the war once again, but not of your own accord, others have sent you, and you have no palatial halls to decorate and embellish. You have no large crowd of officers to lead, and no great mass of men to follow. Your banners are not above all respects have an bearing in a cause like ours, a man who is not ready to bear and suffer calamity and death, and who is not willing to sacrifice his life for freedom, is unfit to be a soldier of freedom."

This address is contained in the following extract:

"These, then, brothers, come to the war once again, but not of your own accord, others have sent you, and you have no palatial halls to decorate and embellish. You have no large crowd of officers to lead, and no great mass of men to follow. Your banners are not above all respects have an bearing in a cause like ours, a man who is not ready to bear and suffer calamity and death, and who is not willing to sacrifice his life for freedom, is unfit to be a soldier of freedom."

This address is contained in the following extract:

"These, then, brothers, come to the war once again, but not of your own accord, others have sent you, and you have no palatial halls to decorate and embellish. You have no large crowd of officers to lead, and no great mass of men to follow. Your banners are not above all respects have an bearing in a cause like ours, a man who is not ready to bear and suffer calamity and death, and who is not willing to sacrifice his life for freedom, is unfit to be a soldier of freedom."

This address is contained in the following extract:

"These, then, brothers, come to the war once again, but not of your own accord, others have sent you, and you have no palatial halls to decorate and embellish. You have no large crowd of officers to lead, and no great mass of men to follow. Your banners are not above all respects have an bearing in a cause like ours, a man who is not ready to bear and suffer calamity and death, and who is not willing to sacrifice his life for freedom, is unfit to be a soldier of freedom."

This address is contained in the following extract:

"These, then, brothers, come to the war once again, but not of your own accord, others have sent you, and you have no palatial halls to decorate and embellish. You have no large crowd of officers to lead, and no great mass of men to follow. Your banners are not above all respects have an bearing in a cause like ours, a man who is not ready to bear and suffer calamity and death, and who is not willing to sacrifice his life for freedom, is unfit to be a soldier of freedom."

This address is contained in the following extract:

"These, then, brothers, come to the war once again, but not of your own accord, others have sent you, and you have no palatial halls to decorate and embellish. You have no large crowd of officers to lead, and no great mass of men to follow. Your banners are not above all respects have an bearing in a cause like ours, a man who is not ready to bear and suffer calamity and death, and who is not willing to sacrifice his life for freedom, is unfit to be a soldier of freedom."

This address is contained in the following extract:

"These, then, brothers, come to the war once again, but not of your own accord, others have sent you, and you have no palatial halls to decorate and embellish. You have no large crowd of officers to lead, and no great mass of men to follow. Your banners are not above all respects have an bearing in a cause like ours, a man who is not ready to bear and suffer calamity and death, and who is not willing to sacrifice his life for freedom, is unfit to be a soldier of freedom."

This address is contained in the following extract:

"These, then, brothers, come to the war once again, but not of your own accord, others have sent you, and you have no palatial halls to decorate and embellish. You have no large crowd of officers to lead, and no great mass of men to follow. Your banners are not above all respects have an bearing in a cause like ours, a man who is not ready to bear and suffer calamity and death, and who is not willing to sacrifice his life for freedom, is unfit to be a soldier of freedom."

This address is contained in the following extract:

"These, then, brothers, come to the war once again, but not of your own accord, others have sent you, and you have no palatial halls to decorate and embellish. You have no large crowd of officers to lead, and no great mass of men to follow. Your banners are not above all respects have an bearing in a cause like ours, a man who is not ready to bear and suffer calamity and death, and who is not willing to sacrifice his life for freedom, is unfit to be a soldier of freedom."

This address is contained in the following extract:

"These, then, brothers, come to the war once again, but not of your own accord, others have sent you, and you have no palatial halls to decorate and embellish. You have no large crowd of officers to lead, and no great mass of men to follow. Your banners are not above all respects have an bearing in a cause like ours, a man who is not ready to bear and suffer calamity and death, and who is not willing to sacrifice his life for freedom, is unfit to be a soldier of freedom."

This address is contained in the following extract:

"These, then, brothers, come to the war once again, but not of your own accord, others have sent you, and you have no palatial halls to decorate and embellish. You have no large crowd of officers to lead, and no great mass of men to follow. Your banners are not above all respects have an bearing in a cause like ours, a man who is not ready to bear and suffer calamity and death, and who is not willing to sacrifice his life for freedom, is unfit to be a soldier of freedom."

This address is contained in the following extract:

"These, then, brothers, come to the war once again, but not of your own accord, others have sent you, and you have no palatial halls to decorate and embellish. You have no large crowd of officers to lead, and no great mass of men to follow. Your banners are not above all respects have an bearing in a cause like ours, a man who is not ready to bear and suffer calamity and death, and who is not willing to sacrifice his life for freedom, is unfit to be a soldier of freedom."

This address is contained in the following extract:

"These, then, brothers, come to the war once again, but not of your own accord, others have sent you, and you have no palatial halls to decorate and embellish. You have no large crowd of officers to lead, and no great mass of men to follow. Your banners are not above all respects have an bearing in a cause like ours, a man who is not ready to bear and suffer calamity and death, and who is not willing to sacrifice his life for freedom, is unfit to be a soldier of freedom."